The number of miles separating New York and Helsinki is 4,110, and the textile company merges the best of both worlds in Tanha Orsjoki's Heatwave, part of the aptly named Etäisyydet (Finnish for "distances") collection. Illustrations of Scandinavian flora and a New York street scene—with a figure based on the designer's husband—are screen-printed on the cotton-polyester textile, best suited to drapery. vallilainterior.fi. circle 377

Need something subtle but still intriguing?

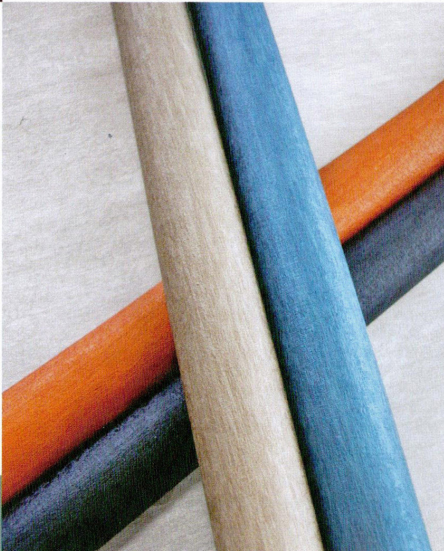

Mindscape, a textured solid inspired by stained wood, marries a delicate wood-grain print with a shimmering type II vinyl surface. The 16 nature-inspired colorways (valerian, ginseng, and hibiscus, to name a few) are earth-minded, too: they are printed with 100 percent recycled inks. lanark.com. circle 375

the peggy platner collection

Malibu-based Peggy Platner revivifies old-world cotton-velvet with three rosy shades inspired by local sunsets. Manufactured in Como, Italy, the acrylic-cotton blend Montara withstands a 40,000-count double-rub test. This latest trio of hues joins six neutrals already in the collection, which takes its name from a California beach. Through the Thomas Lavin Showroom, thomaslavin.com. circle 374 ➔

Proof that great things do sometimes come in small packages is the men's tie-inspired Harper polyester for upholstery, which resists wear and tear from the inside out courtesy of Nanotex technology. By enhancing the product on the molecular level, the manufacturer reduced the risk of stains. The twinkly diamond motif comes in seven color combos, from eggplant to admiral blue. lebatexinc.com. circle 376
