Tuell + Reynolds Combines Traditional Hand Made Techniques With Modern Technology

RANDY TUELL AND VICTORIA REYNOLDS are the creative partnership behind Tuell + Reynolds. They met as architecture students at UC Berkeley and discovered that their different skill sets complimented each other and made for a productive collaboration. Their small but mighty team works out of an old feed store in northern California. They embrace time-honored hand techniques and modern technology: chasing tools, 3D printer, hand-drawn watercolor designs, computer-modeled renderings, hand-sculpted wax maquette, and a digital scanner are all used in harmony. Their work focuses on private commissions for residential projects. They also have their handcrafted collection of lighting, furniture, fire screens, and sculptural objects that feature elemental materials, exquisite textures, and hand oxidized finishes. Inspired by nature, many pieces include petrified wood, fossils, and agate. These materials, combined with bronze and iron, are a reflection of the two creative forces behind Tuell + Reynolds and their shared vision. tuellreynolds.com CH
